Details ——— Sometime next semester (of mutual availability), I will spend a weekend (during which I will sleep) making a game based on a concept you provide. I'll work with you (and, optionally, a team of your choice) to refine the concept into something of appropriate scope and good gameplay. I reserve the right to veto game ideas (in particular, I won't make anything that involves alcohol or that I consider too offensive). We will both own the IP.

My creds ——— I make games. A lot. I'm currently doing a Capstone in Narrative Games and an IS in experimental game design. I currently make at least one new game every two weeks. I frequently attend hackathons and game jams.

7.3 An email

Arash Ushani '11

Starting Bid: $0.42

I'll write you an email.

If bidding reaches $1, you can chose the topic.

If bidding reaches $3, you can chose the context/tone/style.

Additionally, one or more of the following bonuses may occur according to the divisors of the cent amount of the bid. The number of times each bonus is applied is given by the number of times the cent amount of the bid is divisible by that factor. (For example, if the winning bid is $30.60, you get the 2 bonus twice, the 3 bonus twice, the 5 bonus, and the 17 bonus).

2 - If you respond to my email, I'll respond back. All other bonuses, except for the 17 bonus, apply to the response as well.

3 - I'll include a picture.

5 - You can expand the email thread by adding a friend. The number of responses is adjusted according to the number of people in the email thread.

7 - You can choose a codeword that we will use. For example, you can specify that "bunny" is the codeword for "Nazi", and we can discuss how Indiana Jones defeated bunnies.

11 - I'll embed some kind of puzzle in the email. If you solve the puzzle and you donate this SERV auction item next year, I will participate as a member of the email thread.

13 - This is an anti-bonus, allowing me to get out of one of the other bonuses, as I wish.

17 - Instead of sending you an email, I will send you a letter via snail-mail. You can also (optionally) respond via snail-mail. Does not cascade with additional responses, although multiple 17 bonuses will result in multiple snail-mail letters.

19 - I'll draw something and send it along with the email.

Any larger prime - Wildcard. Pick any bonus you wish.

7.41 Mel sketchnotes things for you!

Mel Chua

Starting Bid: $5

I'm the Olin alum who wanted to be an art major (but has Asian parents). Now I draw things about things. Things like the history and philosophy of engineering education. Or the Go programming language. Or cloud surveillance. Or double integrals. Or how to write a research statement. Or cognitive paradigms of learning. Or the influences of literacy on the decline of feminist spirituality. Or... well, see them for yourself at <https://www.evernote.com/pub/metamel/sketchnotes> – my most famous one is "what is engineering," a philosophy comic that was recently covered by the SparkFun blog (<http://blog.melchua.com/2011/10/06/what-is-engineering/>).

I will draw something about a thing for you, be it a book or movie or a talk or a newspaper article or an email or a bunch of notes you have from class. Send me a thing that is accessible to a deaf person (for instance, talk videos need to be transcribed/captioned, or my university/town library should have access to the book) and I will draw and post an open-licensed sketchnote of it for you. Potentially awesome for professors/NINJAs who want cool lecture handouts and/or authors who want one-page summaries of their books!

Fine print: One sketchnote per bid. Page/time limits apply; every dollar is worth 10 pages of reading or 90 seconds of video (so if the book you want me to summarize is 200 pages, the minimum bid is $20). Top 3 bidders win.

7.48 Dinosaur T-Shirt (Size S)

Ari

Starting Bid: $5

Standard size S t-shirt, beige/off-white color, portrays what I believe is a T-Rex or some other type of dinosaur raging over its short arms (yup, definitely a T-Rex now that I think about it) because it can't reach its meal. Actually, now that I look at it more closely, I think he stubbed his toe. Either way, he's ragin' and he's a dino.

The following is copied and pasted from Woot, where the shirt is originally $18 -

Wear this shirt: if you're the kind of person for whom wearing sandals is highly dangerous.

Don't wear this shirt: while walking with grace and elegance.

This shirt tells the world: "I'm feeling good today! Can't wait to... OH CRAP! OUCH! EVERYTHING IS RUINED!"

(Max: Once per place, two nights per place, nights increase some arbitrary amount with some arbitrary amount of money.) The downside? With our fine company comes unsolicited advice. Prepare to receive a (document, thing with words??) containing our worldly knowledge that you don't want! IT MAY BE FULL OF CAPITAL LETTERS. It might be us babbling incoherently over Skype. Be regaled with tales of jam, baking strange things, and living it up in NYC. (So, CSAs.)
